A good school has been taught in every district in the county, but one, and the majority of schools were continued from five to ten months. In his visits the commissioner pointed out the necessity of repairs, and it worked like a charm. The majority of teachers are experienced, and by the aid of institutes and educational journals, are improving every year. The great drawback is lack of funds in some districts, and indisposition of patrons to supplement the school fund in order to supply first-class teachers.
